"Buck" West's Men Prove Un- equal to the Emergency

AND WHEELING WINS THE GAME.

No More Games This Week—Last Night's Bowing Contests—The Interstate League's Future—Pittsburgh Wins Another Game in the East. Kenton Wins at Mansfield Again. The Twins Continue to Win, too.

To-Day's Games—Mansfield at Uhrichsville, Kenton at Findlay, Columbus at Lima.

Yesterday's ball game, the last of the series with Columbus, for six innings was as pretty a contest as the spectator would wish to see. In the seventh and eighth innings Wheeling's heavy hitters got onto Conover's delivery in great shape and aided by some very old gold fielding on the part of the visitors, scored the eight runs that made the Wheeling victory a certainty. Jack Glasscock, who was announced to play at short field for the local team, did not put in an appearance, but Kalkoff's holding in that position was all that could be desired with the exception of one error that did not prove costly. The only other error on the Wheeling side was Pritchard's muff of an easy chance, the first error the big first baseman has had for a week or two. It proved costly, two runs coming in immediately after it had been made.

McDougal, the great, was in the box for the Wheeling and although he was battered rather hard he kept the hits well scattered, so much so that they did not materialize into runs to a great extent. Davis, as usual, gave the pitcher good support behind the bat, Douglas being the only Statesman who pitched a base on him. Conover, Columbus' new twirler, pitched great ball up to the seventh inning. Not a hit was made until the fourth and only three more in the succeeding two innings. It was in the seventh that "Ours" made their sport at the bat. Donovan led off with a single, McDougal got to the initial bag on an error, Regan, Davis, Kane and Kerr made hits, which, with an error or two, allowed five Wheelingites to cross the pan. In the eighth three more runs made on two hits and two errors.

Wheeling was very lucky in the opening inning. Kalkoff and Regan went down to first on balls and scored without a hit being made; a wild throw did the business. No more runs were made until the fourth, when Wheeling got another on Kane's hit, a stolen base and Crotty's single. In the fifth Hill hit out for a double. Miller was safe on Pritchard's error and both came in on Hazen's two-base hit. In the sixth each side scored once. Then came the Waterloo seventh, in which the visitors were completely lost in the shuffle.

In battling the work of Kane and Donovan was the feature of the game. Kane got four safe ones and Donovan was well up with three.

The Columbus team has been vastly strengthened by the addition of Gehner, Conover and Douglas, and with the addition of one or two more good men should cut a very decided figure in the Interstate race. The score in detail:

THE INTER-STATE LEAGUE

Will Hold a Meeting to Consider the Situation Tomorrow.

President H. H. Ziegler, of the Interstate Base Ball Association, yesterday issued a call for a meeting of the league to-morrow afternoon at the American house in Columbus for the purpose of considering the future; whether another club is to be secured to fill the gap caused by the withdrawal of Canton, or whether one of the seven clubs now in shall be dropped and the season played out with six clubs. It is believed that another club will be secured, but if not the league will go ahead with six clubs, probably, Wheeling, Columbus, Lima, Kenton, Twin Cities and Findlay. E. J. Barrows will represent Wheeling at the meeting.

Base Ball Notes.

George Davis yesterday resigned as captain and manager of the New York Giants.

Jack Glasscock left last night for Washington, where he joins the Senators.

The Wheeling club will not play in Fairmont to-day. Instead, the boys will lay off the last three days of the week and be fresh for the fray when they run up against the Twin Cities for six games next week.

President Ziegler is mysteriously missing from the haunts that once knew him, says the Columbus Journal. He has not been seen or heard from since Canton left the league. Rumor has it that he is searching the byways and hedges for another town to take the place of the late lamented Canton. Unless an addition is soon made to the league one city will have to be dropped to make it a six club organization. Mansfield appears to be the most discouraged hamlet in the league, and, as the club is making no money, it is likely to be the candidate for graduation.

The Washington-Cleveland game was called at the beginning of the fifth inning. Washington had scored four runs, with eight hits off Young, while Stockdale allowed the spiders not one. The game, of course, does not count.

THE BANKERS' MEETING.

on interest. Continuing, the speaker said it is impossible to conceive that God would tell his children to lend to strangers on usury and make it unlawful to charge his brother.

THE NEW TESTAMENT, however, has nothing to say on the subject of usury, and the passage quoted shows the propriety of lending on interest. The Koran of the Musselmen men strongly forbids lending money on usury, but in Arabian countries the money lenders can be found just the same.

The little peninsula of Greece showed more advancement than any other country of ancient times. When we look back we are uncertain whether we have reached the point that Greece occupied centuries ago. She had the finest orators, her poetry has never been excelled, her dramas are still high up in the world's estimation and her commerce covered the eastern Mediterranean. Greece was an example of pure democracy and perhaps the most remarkable country in history. She never had a law against the charge of interest or usury. Solon, her great lawgiver—responsible for the first bankruptcy law—is said to have passed a law making the charging of interest legal, making it perfectly proper for people having money to charge for its use by people needing it. The philosophers, however, took another view of it. Aristotle said it was unworthy to charge interest, and others held the same views. Aristotle is responsible for the old doctrine that money is naturally barren, that money cannot beget money and cannot breed. This is to-day the chief argument of those who object to usury, or interest, as it is now commonly called.

Coming over to Rome, which was narrower than Greece in ideas as it was broader in territory, we find early in her history laws against usury, until finally we come to the edict of Justinian regulating interest. Speaking of the attitude of the early fathers of the Christian church, the speaker quoted from several showing that usury was accounted about the worst of crimes. In early English history it is found that the bodies of usurers were not allowed burial in sanctified ground.

Later on it is found that usurers were outlawed. It was not until the time of Henry VIII, of many wives, that a law was passed by the king on the advice of the great Cardinal Wolsey fixing a legal rate of interest, ten percent. This marks the first impulse of commercial expansion. To Henry and his minister belongs the real credit for English commercial expansion. When Elizabeth came to the throne the ground work was laid and that monarch went ahead on the lines laid out by Henry and Wolsey. Notwithstanding the fact that the charge of interest was legalized public opinion in England was against it as is seen in Shakespeare's works.

Coming to a later period in history the speaker referred to words of the great Blackstones on the subject of interest. The original legal rate in Virginia was 6 per cent where it has since remained. Formerly the law against usury in its modern sense was very severe but liberal ideas have prevailed until to-day the penalty is only the forfeiture of the excess charged. The speaker suggested that possibly the limit would eventually be repealed and that the market would guide in the charge for the use of money.

At the conclusion of Mr. Russell's very interesting address a motion was made and passed that a vote of thanks be extended.

THE TRIP TO BENWOOD.

At 8 o'clock about fifty bankers and business men took two special electric cars placed at their disposal by the Wheeling Railway company and went to the Riverside steel and tube works, at Benwood. Mr. J. N. Vance, Mr. Bloomfield and the superintendents of the different departments showed the visitors through the entire works, and explained all the processes. The party was delighted with the visit, and all expressed their interest and pleasure, and were hearty in their thanks to the company. In order that they might see the beautiful effect of a steel casting at night, the furnace was tapped two hours ahead of the usual time and a "blow" made, treating the bankers to a pyrotechnic display such as few of them had ever seen.

PUBLIC ADDRESSES THIS EVENING.

The convention will wind up this evening with a meeting in the opera house, to which the general public is cordially invited by the committee in charge. It will be addressed by Mr. James H. Willock, president of the Second National Bank of Pittsburgh, who is a graceful and fluent speaker and thoroughly posted on finance. Just at this time, when finance is the uppermost theme, he should have a large audience. Major J. H. Hotchkiss, of Staunton, Va., a renowned orator, scientist and financier, will also make an address, and all who hear him will be both entertained and profited. The opera house should be crowded.
